PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

Lou, the Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Law, Falls and Cuts an Ugly Gash in Her Throat.

This morning about 8 o'clock Lou, the eight year old little daughter of Judge and Mrs. A. H. Law, met with a serious and painful accident. As the wind blew the hall door shut breaking the glass pane. The little Miss ran and picked up a piece of the broken glass about which time something attracted her attention in the yard. She started down the step and fell, the glass in her hand. As a result she sustained an ugly gash in the throat an inch and a half in length and about a half inch deep. A messenger was dispatched after Judge Law, who was at his office in the court house. He summoned Dr. Alvis, who upon examination found it necessary to take three stitches in closing up the gash. She was resting easy at last accounts. Had the cut been a little deeper the results would probably have been fatal.

Receiver Appointed.

Yesterday evening just before the adjournment of court, Judge Stuart appointed Lum Johnston receiver for the Mrs. Brown's estate lying on Mud Creek. The suit is brought on action of ejectment and to recover back rents to the amount of about $12,000. This track of land lies on Mud Creek, extending along its banks for about seven miles, and about three miles back, embracing an area of about 3,000 acres with an annual rental of about $3000. Mr. Johnston is to be congratulated on this appointment, as it is among the best in the land.

The Klumpke Sisters.

Miss Dorothea Klumpke, who has distinguished herself in Paris, and who passed her examination before the Sorbonne so triumphantly, presenting a thesis on the nature of the rings of Saturn and receiving her doctor's degree, is a sister of Miss Anna Klumpke of Boston, an artist who has a studio on Beacon street, and who is known as a portrait painter of very exceptional power. Her sister in Paris, who has been made a doctor of science, presented in her thesis before the Sorbonne a very new and original theory regarding the rings of Saturn—that they are composed of solid masses rather than of gaseous or fluid substance, as has heretofore been believed. There is still an other of these talented sisters, Dr. Djerine Klumpke, who is a doctor of medicine and is living abroad.

THE ENGAGED YOUNG MAN.

He Who Follows These Rules Shall Be Happy In His Betrothal.

It will be well for the man who expects to sail smoothly into the matrimonial port to continue those flattering attentions after his engagement which preceded it. It will not suffice for him to talk of what he is saving to make their little home worthy of her. He must, by some magic, be able both to save money for the future and to provide her with the flowers, books, bonbons, theater tickets and other trifles which he bestowed upon her when there was no future to be taken into consideration.

He must treat her people with deference, cordiality and filial affection. He must let her complain of all their faults, retail all the family quarrels and point out all the family imperfections without ever allowing the knowledge he acquires thus to tinge his behavior. He must listen to her abuse of them with sympathy and never by any chance show anything but the highest regard for them himself.

He must like all her friends. He must treat "the girls" with the intimacy which never borders on familiarity; must enjoy their society, which will be thrust upon him at all times and places, and at the same time must be prepared to agree with her estimate of their shortcomings. It will be just as well for him never to admire them too extravagantly.

In public he must always be prepared to show her the attention she needs, but must also be prepared to let her "have a good time," unhampered by his devotion. For instance, he must never let her sit out a dance alone, yet he must never glower when she seems to be dancing often with other men. His manner must be a perfect mingling of devotion and noninterference.

Incidentally it may be added that an occasional dose of neglect is wholesome, and that a semioccasional quarrel is not to be despised.—Philadelphia Times.
